Belief, Aim of

Another popular way is to distinguish between cognitive and conative states, where cognitive states are such that the proposition in their content is regarded as something that is true, while conative states are such that they involve regarding the proposition in the content as something to be made true Velleman, 2000a. What is important here is your ability to be able to identify the values that are important to you. While the former is a matter of aims, goals, and evaluations extrinsic to the notion of belief for example, the goal of believing truths and not believing falsehoods , the latter is a property intrinsic and constitutive of such a mental state Vahid, 2006, 2009, p.

Islam: Basic Beliefs

There is also a big controversy regarding whether the most fundamental concept here is of degrees of belief or credences. Someone who does not intend to guess truly is not really guessing.

The Purpose of Belief

Perhaps it will only really be appreciated by those who share Matson's Milesian inclinations. The relation of belief to truth is thus neither as weak as that of other attitudes like imagining, nor as strong as that of knowledge.
