Book Description: Archaeological Prospection is a fascinating discipline using High-Tech instrumentation for the non-destructive localisation and documentation of archaeological sites and monuments. However, at historical sites in the USA and Canada where walls are less massive and not buried deeply and where there is often magnetic clutter from modern civilization, the Geohm is the optimum instrument. When I returned in May 1968, I found out that not only had the route of the ditch been changed, but that it was already under construction.
