. While two horizontal traces and two types of fecal strings are recognized in the proximal facies belt, only a single horizontal trace fossil and one type of fecal string characterize mudstones in the distal facies belt. Instead, the Devonian palaeotemperature record suggests that Middle Devonian coral-stromatoporoid reefs flourished during cooler time intervals whereas microbial reefs dominated during the warm to very warm Early and Late Devonian.

The most actively drilled area is Newark East field, currently the largest gas field in Texas. The elasmobranchs are represented by four elements: 1 a flattened chondrocranium which bears affinity to the Late Devonian-Carboniferous symmoriid protacrodont 'cladodont' sharks.
