Experts' Analyses

The USAF is deployed at , Taiwan, from 27 January — 17 February 1955 and 1 July — 1 October 1955, using fighters. Responding to the argument made by several chiefs that Taiwan was useful in deflecting Chinese Communist expansion in Southeast Asia, he countered that the primary threat in that region was from infiltration and subversion rather than invasion. In a peace treaty, Morocco gained some land from Spain, but not Ifni nor the Sahara region.

United States Policy and Taiwan: Toward Stability or Crisis

One-China Policy was not intended to please the PRC government, but as a way for Washington to conduct international relations in the region, which Beijing fails to state. Baltic Forest Brothers Insurgency 1944-1953 -Beginning during World War Two, as Soviet forces re-occupied the Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, local guerrillas called The Forest Brothers conduct a war of resistance against the Soviets.

Third Taiwan Strait Crisis

Rather, the island was viewed in relation to broader regional security concerns that also included the safety of the Ryukyus and the Philippines. The Joint Chiefs of Staff jcs concluded in November 1948 that the seizure of the island by Kremlin-oriented Communists would have seriously unfavorable strategic implications for national security: it would give a wartime enemy the capability to dominate the sea lanes between Japan and Malaya and to threaten the Philippines and Ryukyu Islands, would deprive the United States of a base for strategic air operations and control of nearby shipping lanes, and would eliminate the island as a source of food and raw materials for Japan under war conditions.
