The English term was used at an early date to denote a workman who stamped the coins; later it came to denote the supervisors of the mint, who were wealthy and socially elevated members of the merchant class, and who were made responsible for the quality of the coinage by having their names placed on the coins. Minter retired at 29 after being stopped by Sibson and will be remembered for being the kind of fighter who always gave the paying customers value for their money. Lee County is also fortunate in being part of the First Tax District whose detailed 1815 records survive in the Kincade Private Papers.
