Schelling's Philosophy of Revelation: A Critical Edition of the Original Lectures // Research Initiatives // Center for Philosophy of Religion // University of Notre Dame

In both replies he emphasizes, among other things, what he takes to be arbitrary divisions among contingency, potentiality, and change in their theories. Philosophy of religion, as it is currently practiced, often fails to contrast sharply, as it involves discourses speaking of things both eternal and transcendent as well as things temporal and terrestrial in a human and fallible voice. There is, however, enough in common among different religions to ensure that all philosophy of religion will be directed to recognizably identical problems, though in very different forms.

Critical Theory and Religion

Various critics have come forward to give their views on the ontological argument.

Process Theism (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

That is, a dualist is someone who believes that , thought, consciousness, the self, etc.

Philosophy Lessons

This allows Aquinas to affirm omniscience while denying real relations in God; however, it also makes an unambiguous affirmation of the contingency of creaturely decisions difficult if not impossible, as we have already seen in our discussion of God and creativity. In 2011 Amitai Shenhav, David Rand and Joshua Greene of Harvard University published a showing that people who have a tendency to rely on their intuition are more likely to believe in God. The denial of real relations in God also has paradoxical consequences for the concept of divine goodness.

Theses on a Global

Philosophers of religion also investigate the nature of religious experiences because it is often claimed that such experiences provide direct warrant for the existence of God, or of other objects of religious worship.

Philosophical theism

These forms of theism were influenced by process theism, but they deny its claim that God is essentially in a give-and-take relationship with the world. Whitehead is fully aware that there is an imaginative leap in applying these categories to God, but he believes the application can be done in a disciplined and systematic fashion.
