Devotion is not necessarily founded on faith. He was, however, sent shortly to , , where he studied widely.

John Henry Newman

He knew Catholics and Protestants alike had brutally persecuted each other, and he knew the arguments justifying such persecution were intertwined with sinful prejudices and arose not from the Gospel but from contingent historical systems. Lingard had fallen in love with Lancashire, a northern county with a deep recusant tradition. So with extraordinary insouciance Turner lumps into the same narrative mold agnostics like Huxley and Eliot and Catholic converts like Newman and Henry Edward Manning, simply because they had all abandoned their childhood Protestant faith.
