FOR command can also include an optional STEP parameter, setting the increment value which is added to FOR variable every time we call NEXT. In order to avoid seeing errors, we need to make sure that cursor stays within the allowed range 1 0? The following example shows the use of STEP parameter on LINE 30. The following program demonstrates this logic, by drawing a number of concentric circles with radii ranging from 3 to 96, each having different number of points: So, which of the two methods we presented should be preferred when drawing a circle? This is different compared to other languages such as C : All the parameters in the FOR loop must be numbers, but they don't have to be whole integers.
