Chronic exercise training effects on immune function.

There are all kinds of ways to determine when the point of excessive exercise has been reached.

Chronic exercise training effects on immune function.

Physical activity is just one important factor that helps the immune system do its job better. The benefits of exercise—regular and at appropriate intensity levels—for the immune system in respiratory infections such as COVID-19 include increased immunovigilance and improved immune competence, which help in the control of pathogens, a fact that becomes more important considering the immunosenescence and susceptibility of the elderly population to severe infection.

Physical Training Influences the Immune System of Breast Cancer Patients

Fat intake for high energy yield could be increased up to 50% during high volume training. The mechanism of cytokine storm and lymphopenia associated with circulatory alterations and viral dissemination to several organs was proposed as being responsible for viral sepsis. Effects of an exercise and hypocaloric healthy eating intervention on indices of psychological health status, hypothalamic-pituitary-adrenal axis regulation and immune function after early-stage breast cancer: a randomized controlled trial.

Exercise and the immune Response

In my mind this is a clear demonstration that.
