Electrocautery This procedure stops bleeding during surgery. Artificial pacemakers are indicated if impulse formation or impulse conduction is defective, such that bradycardia develops. Studies have shown that most implanted pacemakers are not adversely affected.

Benefits of cardiac pacing in ICD recipients with hypertrophic cardiomyopathy

The reason that the sinus node is the primary pacemaker is simply that it has the highest intrinsic rate of spontaneous depolarization i. Information on clinical characteristics, pacing indications, venous access, implantation data, lead stability at follow-up, and procedure-related complications were obtained. The wireless industry is investigating that possibility.

But, it is best to ask your doctor what types of machines or equipment you should avoid. Studies have shown that they may have a role in preventing cardiac arrest in high-risk patients who haven't had, but are at risk for, life-threatening ventricular arrhythmias. Impulse transmission is rapid through the bundle of His and the Purkinje fibers, such that virtually all ventricular myocardium is activated depolarized simultaneously.
