I need like a hole in my head,
And what have I done to make
the old man come down and say I'm not fit
to be a dad?
I need like a hole in my head,
And what have I done to make
the old man come down
and say I'm not fit
to be a dad?

I need like a hole in my head,
I need like a hole in my head,
I need like a hole in my head,
I need like a hole in my head,

So here I go... all... scratch ing a road in the sand... old hole... me

Half a World Away by Cynthia Kadohata

But this book is the first one that helped me FEEL what attachment difficulties FEEL like - especially for older children who are adopted. I didn't cry, I did well up a few times but didn't actually shed a tear. For me, Half A World Away was a really easy read and was full of loveable characters, especially the children who offered a breath of fresh air and elements of comedy to the story.

Half a World Away by Cynthia Kadohata

As for the storyline, I enjoyed the flow and the transition from one scene to the next.

Half A World Away by Libby Gleeson

Mary Quattlebaum reviewed it for us: I think maybe a high 3, but I'll still stick with 3.

Half a World Away (TV Episode 2011)

Its great that the chapters jump between the two POVs as both are nervous about meeting after Kerry finally reaching out through the adoption agency. I loved his relationship with his mom, and I loved how his relationship transitioned with his dad.
