Canada goes urban

Although people in the northern colonies had few slaves, they did employ large numbers of indentured servants, mostly of European origin, who were bound to their employers by contracts and debts that in many cases were impossible to pay off.

Canada goes urban

The Conservative Party was shut out in these three cities trailing the Liberal Party by 14 percentage points in and around Vancouver and 16 points in and around Toronto, for instance, and this had major implications for the overall national result.

Life in Urban vs Rural Canada

Countries like India, Afghanistan, China, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia have a lower sex ratio.

The urban/rural divide and a more inclusive Canada

It is a significant indicator of population composition since a large size of the population in the 15- 59 age group shows a huge working population. These communities, with a median population size of 16,535, include counties or county equivalents such as Evangeline Parish, Louisiana; Navajo County, Arizona; and Elk County, Pennsylvania.

Age: Sex, ratio, rural

Because there were not enough new immigrants to offset those departures, rural counties as a group grew only because they had more births than deaths.

The urban/rural divide and a more inclusive Canada

Among the hardest hit counties were those where the economy is based on farming, about a fifth of rural counties. Originally published on Policy Options February 12, 2021 Canadian policy-makers and citizens must be more attuned to the potential for rising political polarization in our democracy. Answer: The age-sex structure of a population refers to the number of males and females in different age groups.

Describe the rural

Level 3: Population centre size class categories and rural area by province and territory This level is made up of the four category names large urban population centres, medium population centres, small population centres and rural area , by province and territory. As a result, in each county type, adults ages 65 and older now make up a larger share of the total population than in 2000.
