Richard Henry Dana, Jr. : Two Years Before the Mast & Other Voyages

In 1878 he packed up and left for Europe, furious that his appointment as minister to England had failed of approval in the Senate. Tired of the tedium of a slow convalescence, he decided on a sea voyage; and choosing to go as a sailor rather than a passenger, he shipped from Boston on August 14, 1834, on the brig Pilgrim, bound for the coast of California.
