National identity, ethnic group, language and religion question development for Census 2021

The 2018 White Paper outlined our proposals for the topic of national identity, ethnic group, religion and language. One was positioned after the questions on national identity and ethnicity, and the other was positioned before the questions on national identity and ethnicity.

The two-stage question design with tick-boxes on the first and second stages was widely considered to be the easiest to answer and had the lowest respondent burden. This is a measure of how a person connects or identifies with a religion, whether or not they actively practice it. This would provide suggested responses as respondents typed in their answer.

Language and Identity: National, Ethnic, Religious by John E. Joseph

As in the 2011 Census testing, participants preferred the grammatically incorrect version, as it reflects how people self-identify. Language and Identity: National, Ethnic, Religious. The English language skills question is the same as in England and Wales.

Language and Identity: National, Ethnic, Religious

We present details of this evaluation in Annex 3. Three versions of the question were tested 2016:7 with participants from different ethnic groups.
