The Trail of the Maine Pioneer Content Page

This included lots of Class 2 loose talus, sometimes a little treacherous since moving one rock the wrong way seems like it could set off a bunch more. An of the interesting feature of the summit is the 7 foot tall cairn. One word of caution, when we finished the train we ended up on the road back to the car parks.

Goldhorn

It has been a number of years since we have visited this area and back then, FSR 627 did not extend as far as it does now and the trailhead was found at a lower elevation. You have enabled us to detect a fast fading trail which, but for you, might have been forever obliterated. A long-exposure picture Matthew took from our campsite at Upper Snow Lake Eric and Matthew Gilbertson July 13-15, 2018 July 13 — drive the Rainy Pass, hike to upper Snow Lake, climb Golden Horn then climb Tower, camp at lake.

Golden Horn, Tower Mountain, and Azurite Peak

There are a number of campsites above Lower Ice Lake. We dubbed the route Fuck the Pain Away IV 5. Here snowfields may cross the trail until August.
