New Criticism
A literary movement that started in the late 1920s and 1930s and originated in reaction to modernism. It claims that new critics are no longer concerned with merely interpretations of the text, e.g., with the biography or psychology of the author or the work's relationship to history. Instead, they focus on the text itself and its formal elements. The main idea is that the meaning of a text is determined by its internal structure and should not be judged by reference to considerations beyond itself. A poem consists less of what it says than of how it says it. The meaning of a poem is derived from the complex and sophisticated organization of a set of complex experiences in a verbal form. The most prominent New Critics were John Crowe Ransom, Allen Tate, Robert Penn Warren, John Crowe Ransom, Robert Frost, William Carlos Williams, Wallace Stevens, T.S. Eliot, F.R. Leavis, Robert Penn Warren, W.K. Wimsatt, R.P. Blackmur, René Wellek, Austin Quigley, and I.A. Richards.

Key Terms
Intentional Fallacy - regarding the meaning of a poem with the author's intentions.
Affective Fallacy - confusing the meaning of a text with how it makes the reader feel. A reader's emotional response to a text generally does not produce a reliable interpretation.
