The island of has continued to prefer the earlier system, although a modified system that is orthographically somewhat between Pinyin and Wade-Giles has been in limited use there since about 2000.

Pinyin table

The Chinese themselves experimented with several systems to transcribe local expressions for non-Chinese publications, but in mainland China these were all replaced officially in 1979 by the clearer system. A few readings reflect a Standard Chinese approximation of a regionalism that is otherwise never encountered in either putonghua or guoyu. They are used to avoid ambiguity when writing words in pinyin.
