And why do so many such stories involve such heroines and end as they do? The narrative of the event is crucial to recovery. Scholarship in Holocaust studies as well as feminist studies and postcolonial criticism deals with a network of social and cultural factors that influence the linguistic and ethical terms of representing trauma. Quintin Hoare and Geoffrey Nowell Smith.

Thus, while cultural critics have embraced both Althusser's notion that works of literature reflect certain ideological formations and his notion that, at the same time, literary works may be relatively distant from or even resistant to ideology, they have rejected the narrow limits within which Althusser and other Marxists have defined literature.

What is Cultural Criticism?

The mind or soul was permanent and, in its rationality, was the source of all our knowledge.

Body in Cultural Studies

Benjamin not only praised modernist movements, such as Dadaism, but also saw as hopeful the development of new art forms utilizing mechanical production and reproduction. Worlds of Hurt: Reading the Literatures of Trauma.
