In defence of politics : Crick, Bernard, 1929

Consider, for example, the first real political campaign in American history, between Thomas Jefferson and John Adams in 1800. They speak about the importance of deepening the public's understanding of key issues, yet they often build caricatures and toss out simplistic and misleading labels.

In Defense of Politics

An extreme situation is one where the very survival, in fact, the very independence of a society, is at stake and for Schmitt every situation is potentially a life and death struggle against a kind of existential enemy where one must decide to choose up sides between friends and enemy. Perhaps the most successful social reform in decades was the 1996 welfare bill, which reversed 60 years of federal welfare policy by ending the legal entitlement to welfare benefits, mandating that a large percentage of recipients work, and imposing a five-year time limit on the receipt of federally-funded benefits. It suffers from a huge image problem both in the world as well as in Bangladesh.

RealClearPolitics

There is a dangerous tendency to ignore the productive social work done by local U. Millions of voters were written off as the credulous victims of emotion and rhetoric. To forget our past is to forego our present, and forfeit our future.

In Defence of Politics (Continuum Impacts) Sir Bernard Crick: Continuum

This school decentralizes the party apparatus in that it lets, for example, the Italians control their neighborhoods, the Blacks control their neighborhoods, the Jews their neighborhoods, the Latinos their neighborhoods and so on. The political, he wrote, is the most intense and extreme antagonism, becomes that much more political the closer it approaches to the extreme point, that of the friend, enemy grouping, he says. We are in living through an especially partisan time now, but factionalism has always been a problem, under every type of political system.

BBC Radio 4

Abraham Lincoln is a unique figure in American history, and there is a danger in measuring the quality of our arguments by the quality of his. Nor did he care that the majority of people in that room, if polled, would have probably confessed to voting for Trump in 2016 and considering voting for him again in 2020.

In defence of post

Progress in that nation will come slowly, over many years, and we will witness both successes and set-backs along the way. Five years ago, Afghanistan was ruled by one of the most sadistic regimes in modern times - and perhaps in history. We cannot usher the Kingdom of God into this world; that task belongs to Another.

In defence of post

But people do not have to choose between local and national politics.
