Approaches of Watershed Management

By providing a theoretical rent-seeking model and analysing a set of geo-coded data for mines, night-time light emissions, local populations and ethnic homelands, we show that the spatial distribution of resources is a major driving factor of ethnic income inequality. Some teachers found RBL to be a positive collaborating experience with the teacher-librarian. To develop learning awareness amongst rural communities on various aspects such as traditional forest management, natural resource management and community networks.

Resource based learning 2

Although the authors do not provide a solution to this problem, other commentators argue that teachers should foster a collegial environment conducive to cooperative, not competitive, learning Freire1998.
