Shomin became a lecturer in the Tokyo School of Fine Arts and five years later was named an Imperial Craftsman.

Bakumatsu, Ishin Edo shomin no tanoshimi (2000 edition)

That kind of joint enterprise typifies the later activities of Meiji craftsmen: designer, hammerer or caster, inlayer and engraver all working on a single object. The necks of the vases are designed with bands of phoenixes and scrolling paulownia, perhaps suggesting the imperial connection of both artists.
