Islamic world

As with other colonized people, Muslims were victims of the colonial process in almost every sense. Interesting things from the book: -Damascus, Cairo and Baghdad were the centres of Islam, al-Andalus was on the periphery and considered quite provincial in regards to these cosmopolitan centres of enlightenment -Spain and Portugal are more homogeneous than any other European country, except Norway and Switzerland.

Where does Islamophobia come from? How can we push back against it?

It is a story of pathos and disappointment—motifs of a repressed society that recur in his novels, and emotions that Aswany experienced in his own life.

Islam and Britain: Muslim Mission in an Age of Empire: Ron Geaves: Bloomsbury Academic

On the British right, the companies of the 24th and the Natal Native Infantry were unable to prevent this envelopment. They fought on with pistols and knives, until they were all struck down. And the democratic systems have shown themselves to be the most amenable to that.

Crusade and Jihad

Black Hawk helicopters ferried the Navy SEALs in the nighttime raid dubbed Operation Geronimo that killed Osama bin Laden in Pakistan.

Chinua Achebe's Things Fall Apart

Davies attributes much of this reaction to jealousy. I'm not so sure that the West is saying that it's threatening to them. It's a rational attitude, it's empirical, it's secular in the sense that it's not linked to the revealed truth or to a scripture.

Postcolonial Theory and Criticism: A Bibliography

We have adopted voluntarily modernization in Turkey, but without criticism. But he was careful what literature his son was exposed to. You have also always had African-American mosques.
