Project MUSE

Grieveson concentrates on a very brief span of film history — less than a decade, from 1906 to 1914. Whichever side of the debate you support, it can provoke more heat than light, and a fierce conviction that authority and justice are on your side! Grieveson sees these two films, then, as representing both sides of a divide that became increasingly fixed — between the educational film and the entertainment film.

The Unwritten Law (1907 film)

Lee Grieveson draws on extensive original research to examine the White slave films, dramas documenting sex scandals, filmed prize fights featuring the controversial African-American boxer Jack Johnson, D. Grieveson demonstrates his mastery of this material in a way that is almost unprecedented and completely exemplary.

Project MUSE

Policing Cinema develops new perspectives for the understanding of censorship and regulation and the complex relations between governance and culture. Lee Grieveson draws on extensive original research to examine the controversies over these films and over cinema more generally.

Policing Cinema: Movies and Censorship in Early

He situates these contestations in the context of regulatory concerns about populations and governance in an early-twentieth-century America grappling with the powerful forces of modernity, in particular, immigration, class formation and conflict, and changing gender roles.
