Few contraindications for surgery exist. Many of the complications listed are significantly reduced with timely diagnosis, adequate reduction, stable surgical fixation, and appropriate postoperative care. Please keep in mind that you need to proceed with exercises once your doctor has recommended for.

Bado classification of Monteggia fracture

Ligaments on the inner and outer sides of the elbow hold the joint together and muscles surround the joint on the front and back sides. Such fractures are easily overlooked due to the prominence of the ulna fracture.

A very rare presentation of reoperation combined both old Monteggia fracture and secondary distal radioulnar joint dislocation in adult

It was originally thought to be caused by direct violence to the posterior part of the forearm, in which the force first fractured the ulna, and then in some cases dislocated the radial head anteriorly.
