Dangerous liaisons

Your little affair with Paris is going to do just that. Horace, and all refer to Troilus in this way. Thus the war opens with a father killing a son and closes with a son killing a father.

Troilus and Cressida, Act 3, scene 2

His poem is described by the Middle English expert C. Heavens, what a man is there! Does that suggest Helen willingly left her husband for Paris? This gives a poor representation of woman and the respect they should have for themselves. .

SCENE III. The Grecian camp. Before Achilles' tent.

No communion In sex or elsewhere can be reached and kept Perfectly for ever. CRESSIDA So he saies here. The conquest of Troy is left unfinished, as the Trojans learn of the death of their hero.

She appears to be easy when she accepts the first man who approaches her after Troilus leaves. Ne're looke, ne're looke; the Eagles are eyes of Troilus.

Feminist Approaches When Viewing Cressida's Character

Diomedes, the deceitful Greek commander, seeks out and finds Cressida alone in her tent. Paris is durt to him, and I admirable man! You must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? I love you now ; but not, till now, so much But I might master it.

Troilus and Cressida, Act 3, scene 2

To this effect, Achilles, have I moved you: A woman impudent and mannish grown Is not more loathed than an effeminate man In time of action. There's no iesting, you see? CRESSIDA And t'had beene a greene haire, I should haue An't had been a green hair I should have TC I. And Cassandra laughed — TC I.

Troilus and Cressida: us as we are on JSTOR

Kahn sees Cressida as a woman that has no respect for herself nor does she take pride in being a woman.
