Asphalta

Just have a laugh or two. Each god was responsible for protecting a particular organ and was himself protected by a companion goddess. The oldest date from the or the , and are made of stone or wood.

Canopic Jars of ancient Egypt

You nearly got your head slammed into the back of your seat when you landed, feeling as the air moved across your head as the ship stopped, beginning to hover over the ground as you reached over to the landing gear buttons, with you hearing as the landing gear removed itself from the insides of the ship, the eventual impact of the gear into the ground letting out a loud thunk sound as it hit the ground, the engines shutting down almost instantly.

The Face of the Goddess

Better universities guarantee a survivable stipend for their graduate students, but not all schools do.

Preserving King Tut's Guts: The Canopic Shrine and Jars Introduced

By the time one of her truest adherents had claimed the perfect place and slipped into it, the sales are exhausted, the shelves bare, the passengers bored and immune to the parking fever that has gripped their driver. When you're a block or so away from your destination just repeat this mantra and miraculously a parking spot will miraculously appear. No Egyptian source completely outlines exactly what was done in what order, or for how long Egyptologists would go crazy if some text were found that detailed this process.
