Abraham had intended the Onedin story to continue right up to the 1970s, following the progress of the descendants of Charlotte Onedin and William Frazer, played by and Marc Harrison in the TV series. She was the spinster daughter of Captain Joshua Webster , owner of the topsail schooner Charlotte Rhodes. Series two follows a similar pattern, with edited versions arriving on VHS and DVD in the UK from the same companies listed above.

The Trade Winds by Cyril Abraham

The series was created by. Taught by Anne Onedin to read and write, he became a captain and served on all of Onedin's ships. James is still grieving over Anne's death, but another offer of marriage has come his way.

Suggested real-life inspirations include shipping line owner of Liverpool a leading character in the series was named 'Captain Baines' , and various members of the family. Another falling out led Baines to buy his own ship, but a fire broke out destroying the ship and killing Tom, a boy he and James took on first as a cabin boy and then as an indentured lad.
